Selène "The One I Have"
A few nights ago, a dark sky was visible. No stars or moon.
This made me think of this story, because in our folklore, some would say that Kââr did not fall asleep that night...
takes another sip then starts miming his sentences
One night, a little crow couldn't sleep anymore. He kept tossing and turning in his cradle, unable to stir.

Cornelia "Sweet Dove"
has arrived

Selène "The One I Have"
He suspected that he shouldn't get up, that it wasn't the right time or the right moment, but the nighttime darkness terrified him, like many children.
stops when he sees Cornelia come through the door.
She gestures for him to take a seat.

stops when he sees Cornelia come through the door.
She gestures for him to take a seat.
then continue.
The next day, when the alarm was rung by Théophile le Coq, the local singer, his mother came to wake him up without a single minute's delay.
she takes a soft and calm voice.
"Croa, hello my little Kââr, did you sleep well? How are you feeling today?"

Mangani "Dakosan"
comes forward in turn and then gives him the reply
He, still disturbed and overcome with fear, suddenly asked her without even deigning to answer: "Croak, Mom, why is the night so dark, while the day is so bright and full of warmth?"

Ceolsige Coconut Maque Mangwa
gasps and clasps her hands together in surprise that Mangani jumped in

Selène “The One I Have”
She smiles broadly in surprise and continues on her way
“Croak, my beloved, ever since I have known this world, it has been like this. I cannot explain it to you in other words. Only one of the oldest crows, he among the wise, the great scholar, would certainly have a fine word that would perhaps earn you an answer.”
Mangani "Dakosan"
“Crow, well then! I'll go see him and wait for him to say it, even if it means growing a beard!”
then he goes back to sit down next to his companion.

Seeing the determination in his eyes, the mother raven could only smile at him. Knowing it was for the best, she let him go on his quest for knowledge without saying anything.

seeing Selene's joy, she turns to Mangani, beaming a smile, and gives him a kiss
Mangani "Dakosan"
He smiled slightly embarrassed but happy to have been able to help his sister.
then jumps when he hears Fantine cough
Fantine “The Seasick”
That bird. Again and again.
Selène “The One I Have”
As each night passed, Kââr was frozen again; he huddled in his bed of fortnue, hoping that the darkness had already gone.
He traveled through lands, mountains, and valleys, asking for directions in every hamlet. No bird knew the name of this wise old man, until one day he met another crow who delivered a strange message.

she takes on a nasal voice
"Croak, you who seek me, cross the great ebony forest, follow the course of the light and climb the distant mountain. I will wait for you at the top of the tallest oak tree..."
Then...
"Hurry!" said the crow, flying away with a haughty flight.
Kââr, troubled, did not have a moment to question this strange messenger.
But still determined, he continued his epic.
As each day passed, he followed the course of the light towards a high and sublime mountain welcoming within it the circular fire, from dusk to sunrise.
She pauses and takes a small sip of beer.

then she continues
After several weeks, he finally arrived at the summit of this immense rock.
Overlooked by a forest that, by common sense, should not exist, he entered a zone of gentle but heavy silence that no one would dare to break on their own.
Scanning, searching and eyeing the surroundings, he could not help but pronounce in his haste:
Mangani "Dakosan"
Gets up and says the sentence for him
"Croak, how am I going to find this wise old man's home? I mustn't miss him!"
Selène "The One I Have"
"SHHHH!" suddenly rang out
With a start, he dropped his bundle, ashamed of having broken the calm and turning pale. He stopped dead, apologizing for having been rude.

The wooded path, strewn with dead leaves, seemed to come alive for a moment. A light breeze blew away several of these ancient remains, and the tree branches came to life with a melodious rustling.

Duncan Kokosmaque
scratches his chin, completely overthinking the story

Selène “The One I Have”
Thus a divine warmth transported him to the lair of the wise scholar, that raven older than all paths, to the most merciful gaze.

But if it was all just operation to catch murderer it must be spectacular and hard to organise
I was late to it so i heard only it from people who believed it from bottom of they hearts.
Even if there is possibility that spider head legend was just fake story told by RATS employees.

There was my Pa, aye, the sort who scowls at his wife even when the stew is hot and the hearth is too! Always saying she never did a thing right! Well... that's what SHE said, anyways.
lifts a finger and waves it back and forth
But, ahhhh! She was a clever one, and that part's true! She says to him, 'Well then, Mackobert, if you think me so useless, you take the house, I'll take the scythe.'
And ah, well, he agreed. Which, come to think of it, was probably his worst mistake right there!

chuckles, then shifts his weight a bit to continue

So off she goes to the hayfields, and he stays back. And what does my Pa do? He tries the churn butter, but leaves it to fetch ale!

crudely mimes twisting a tap into a cask, then winces as though it spilled in front of him

So! So! The family pig knocks over the cream. The ale runs out all over the floor. He remembers the cow's still locked in the shed!

So... eh... instead of leading it down to grass like anyone sensible... he thinks to haul the damn thing onto the roof!

Fantine "The Seasick"

The cow?

Duncan Kokosmaque

That's right the cow!

laughs and shrugs

Of course, that might sound strange to anyone from the south who have never put sod on their birch roofs in the winter!

It keeps a man warm, and keeps the water out! But that grass up there isn't for no cows!

Anyways! The man drags the churn up there too! Fretting that the piglet might upset it! By the gods, I can't blame him for that part! I'd do the same!

But in the end, the cream's wasted, the cow is tied to the chimney, and HE'S tied to the cow!

Fantine "The Seasick"

Ah yes pigs can be scary.

I seen once thief tried to stole piglet but well he end feeding pigs.

Duncan Kokosmaque

Bahaha! That will happen with wrangling piglets!

So of course, the cow falls, and he's hauled straight up the chimney like a sack of linseed!

So Ma comes home after scything, finds the cow swinging between earth and sky, cuts the rope clean, and...
gestures a falling object with his hands ending in a big splash
SPLASH!
Down goes Pa into the stew pot, head first! And that, well... that was the only useful thing he managed in the house all day!
...thickening the broth!
